New York

View of Manhattan Island from the East River. The wide building in the foreground is the United Nations Headquarters. Behind it, topped with arches and a spire, is the Chrysler Building.

The Statue of Liberty (as seen from 1,500 feet) resides on Liberty Island in New York Harbor. The Financial District of lower Manhattan is visible in the background. The island to the left is Ellis Island. Both the Hudson River and the East River terminate at the Southern tip of Manhattan where it officially becomes Upper New York Bay, or more popularly, New York Harbor. The statue is about 2 miles South of tip of Manhattan.

NEW YORK (CNNfn) - Building 7 World Trade Center, was across the street and northeast from the landmark twin towers.

It caught fire and collapsed September 11, 2001: 6:07 p.m. ET hours after the landmark twin towers crumbled. The smaller building had reportedly been evacuated when the tower above it collapsed. Among the tenants of the building was the U.S. General Accounting Office, located on the 25th floor. Other nearby buildings were ablaze in the area
